

ISSB of CA and CPPA present the Seventeenth Annual Northern California Child Sexual Abuse Awareness Conference:
Featuring Dr. Collin Ross, of the Ross Institute in Texas
Trauma Model Therapy for Child Sexual Abuse

April 30th, 2011, 9:30 am to 5:00 pm, at the Davis Senior Center, 646 A St., Davis, California

As always, the 2011 ISSB Conference will be offered at no-cost and no-registration, so that all who care to may attend, and can remain anonymous if they so choose.

Dr. Ross will train attendees on the inspired techniques used successfully in his programs for patients with dual-diagnosis and comorbidities. Trauma and sexual abuse survivors often suffer from depression, anxiety, dissociation, somatization, borderline personality, amnesias, self injury, substance abuse, eating disorders, and more. Dr. Ross's methods are tested and effective across the board for all of these conditions.

Subtopics of the workshop will include:

- The Problem of Attachment to the Perpetrator in Child Abuse Victims
- Long Term Effects of Child Abuse
- A Trauma Model of Borderline Personality Disorder
- A Dissociative Subtype of Schizophrenia
- How to Choose a Trauma Therapist
- Childhood Trauma and Eating Disorders

Learning Objectives:

1. To describe the problem of attachment to the perpetrator in family violence
2. To describe the locus of control shift in family violence dynamics
3. To explain the dissociative structural model
4. To learn different treatment techniques for a variety of behavioral issues
5. To explore the relationship between trauma and eating disorders

Colin A. Ross, MD, directs the Trauma Program at Timberlawn Hospital in Dallas, Texas, and provides consultation to Trauma Programs at the Forest View Hospital in Michigan, and the Del Amo Hospital in Torrance, California. He is author of seven books on trauma and dissociation, dozens of research articles, and has presented workshops all over the world, including in Australia and China.
